Erin N. Baldwin, JD
Class of 2010

After graduating from Carroll High School in 2010, Erin Baldwin attended Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee. At Vanderbilt, she triple-majored in Political Science, Art History, and Spanish and also studied abroad in Madrid. She graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree, magna cum laude, in 2014.

Erin then attended Yale Law School where she participated in Yale's Veterans Legal Services Clinic and was Co-President of the International Refugee Assistance Project. She received her Juris Doctor Degree in 2017.

Upon completing law school, Erin joined an international law firm in New York City where she focused on representing clients in complex commercial litigation and advising clients conducting business internationally. Erin also worked on various pro bono matters ranging from immigration applications to class action litigation.

In 2019, Erin moved back to Ohio to complete a year-long clerkship with a federal judge in Cleveland. Following her clerkship, Erin returned to New York City and rejoined the international law firm. She currently focuses her legal practice on white-collar criminal defense and complex commercial litigation. She has also continued to develop her pro bono practice.

Erin enjoys cooking, traveling, and spending time with her dog.

Some of Erin's favorite Carroll High School memories were made in the student section at football games. She always had a ton of fun dressing for themes and cheering on the Patriots!
