FROM THE PRINCIPAL

Fostering Inclusion for a Diverse Community

In his encyclical Fratelli Tutti, Pope Francis writes, “We are many parts, but one body. Let us celebrate our humanity and practice dreaming once again – of unity, of peace, of justice, of truth, of love.” We at Archbishop Carroll

High School are striving to do just that, to be a welcoming place for our community members and to join as one in the Body of Christ.

As you will read in this edition of Reflections, our students and families continue to inspire and serve others, both on campus and off. As we update our campus and operations, we are not just focused on simply updating the facade of our building and classrooms. Rather, we try to make Carroll a welcoming place with each improvement to our beloved alma mater. For example, with the addition of Gretchen’s Pavilion, guests using wheelchairs may now sit alongside their fellow fans in the bleachers to cheer on the Patriots.

In the Greater Dayton area, more families are joining our community whose native language spoken at home is something other than English. We are ensuring that those families not only have access to important information for their students during the school year but that they also feel the love and support that comes with being a Carroll Patriot. For them, we welcome our longtime Spanish teacher, Mrs. Tara Ashworth, as our new Director of Community Engagement and Inclusion with an enthusiastic “Bienvenidos!” She has already spent countless moments breaking language barriers to allow all of our families to be better connected members of our Patriot Family.

This past December, our students witnessed and participated in a moving prayer and Marian procession in honor of the feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe. Along with our Campus Ministry team, the Spanish for Heritage Speakers class was an integral part of the planning and execution of the memorable ceremony. Seeing our student body witnessing and partaking in the celebration, all united in honoring our blessed Mother, was so moving. I look forward to seeing our students grow in faith, love, and community as we continue to grow this aspect of our student programming.

In this day and age, possibly more than ever, we are called to rise above the rhetoric of hate and division frequently displayed in our world and celebrate our unique differences instead. As Pope Francis wrote, we in the Archbishop Carroll community are many parts: artists, athletes, and learners with various abilities and experiences. Yet, as a Catholic family, we all strive to be faith-filled disciples and one in Jesus Christ.

Though different, we remain united by our call to serve God. In doing so, may we Patriots be an example of unity and peace in our world.

Blessings,

HOUSE KEEPING | PATRIOT HOUSE CUP

Baltimore

The theme for this year's Lip Sync Battle was decades, and Baltimore was given the 50s. We did a mashup of eight songs ranging from Chuck Berry to Elvis. Every Family Room was given a specific song, and they were in charge of making up the choreography along with the costumes. Our Captains dressed up as the various artists from the 50s, and we also had a group of Elvis impersonators interacting with the crowd and judges. Baltimore holds this competition in a high standard because we want to make sure everyone has a chance to be in the spotlight.

As a House, we would like to recognize Laura Kabban '25 for her involvement in figure skating outside of school. She has skated competitively for six years, earning around 50 medals and the title of "US Figure Skating Gold Medalist". While Laura does solo events she also is a part of a synchronized skating team of twenty skaters. She exemplifies the Family aspect of Baltimore by seeing the team as a whole rather than twenty parts.

-Jack Asebrook '24

Charity

Shawn Seymour '25 recently committed to IU Indianapolis for soccer. A highlight from his soccer season last semester was beating Alter in the GCL. Shawn is a multi-sport athlete who also plays basketball this semester. He is looking forward to the upcoming tournaments and enjoys playing with his best friends.

Before Thanksgiving break, Charity had a taco party. This brought the whole House together as we all went into the lobby to get the ingredients to make our tacos! After we passed out the food, everyone went back to their Family Rooms and enjoyed Thanksgiving activities or movies.

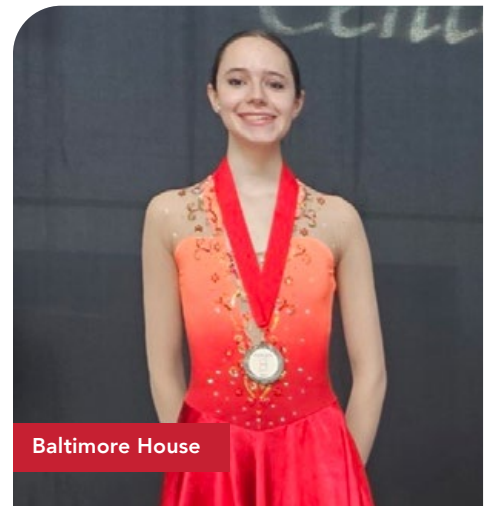

-Madelyn Smith '24

Gonzaga

One of the best things we do in our House System is our competitions. This year, Gonzaga worked together with Trinity to put together our Trivia Competition. We worked together to create different categories, questions, and even fun activities to get all the Houses involved between rounds. In the end, Gonzaga claimed victory as champions of the Trivia Competition.

Ethan Bailey '26 had a life-changing experience in finding his passion for rowing. He traveled to different states for races and finished in first place at some competitions. He advanced to fourth overall and went to nationals in Florida. He has made lifelong friends along the way and formed a team with a very tight bond.

-Lauren Stumpfl '24

Mercy

Mercy House has gone above and beyond to help and serve others in our community. Our annual food drive collected over 2,000 food items for the backpack program at St. Helen Parish, and we went caroling during exam week at a local nursing home. This school year, the Purple Parent Committee was created to build a valuable relationship between students, faculty, and parents. This partnership made all of our events possible: popsicle picnics, pumpkin painting, and the support and spirit that drove our house to win the Lip Sync Battle.

Jorja Burke '25 is a member of Family Room 204 who maintains a very rigorous academic course load and balances a job after school; however, she never wavers in stepping up to help Mercy House. Whenever her Captain is out or we are planning a whole House event, we can count on Jorja to enthusiastically support our leadership team. Jorja feels like Mercy is family to her and gives her a great supporting community.

-Savannah Begley '24

Mercy House

St. Mary's

St. Mary's House has been very successful in many different ways, including finishing in second place in the first two House Events of the year. But, we are most proud of our first quarter service project. We made and delivered 15 no-sew blankets, and Sarah Price '24 and Melaine Hoffman '24 delivered them to the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

Madeline Kramer '25 has been the perfect example of service. She helps at each All School Mass by creating and flipping slides for music. She also makes rosaries and has made over 600 rosaries since her freshman year. Madeline adds that, "serving others makes me feel at peace and makes me feel like I am making a difference in the world".

-Elyssa Bartlett '24

Trinity

Lily Wittman '24 and Nora Sableski '24 recently have made an impact in the Carroll community through the International Thespan Society. Nora (president) and Lily (historian) have led many successful meetings and service activities that better our community. Along with doing service activities, they also work to raise money for the drama club.

As a group, one of the things that Trinity did recently was a whole House service project. Everyone in Trinity worked to make crafts for little kids at elementary schools. These crafts were then sent to the kids in order to bring a smile to their faces.

MEET TARA ASHWORTH

Please allow me to express how honored I am to serve as the Director of Community Engagement and Inclusion at Archbishop Carroll High School. This new position and opportunity has set us on a new path of bringing awareness, support, and appreciation of all cultures represented here on campus. In addition to supporting and celebrating all cultures, this new department is a collaboration of many projects, committees, and clubs I have created or worked on to support all diverse learning abilities and unique skills that our students possess. As your director of this new journey, I look forward to working with the community in partnership with our faculty, students, and families to support all students and create new platforms such as Multicultural Club and our Community Engagement Team as we strive to be a more inclusive community.

I grew up in Dayton where I attended St. Anthony Catholic School and Kettering City Schools. I earned my Bachelor's of Arts in Spanish Education and Teaching English as a Second Language at Indiana State University and spent time studying abroad in Costa Rica before accepting my first teaching position at Carroll right out of college in 2012. I have loved calling Carroll home for the last decade and was blessed with many wonderful teaching and learning experiences sparking my inspiration to study leadership in education. After completing a principalship internship with administrative colleagues here last year, I earned my Master's degree in Education Administration from Xavier University. My years of experience being mentored and teaching here has helped shape me into the leader I am today. Grateful is an understatement.

I am confident all members of our community want our students to have a safe sense of belonging, and my hope is that the work I do each day to improve communications among all stakeholders, combined with my motivation to celebrate all cultures, continues to fulfill that mission. As Catholics, we know the truth to be that all people have dignity as they were made in the image and likeness of God. Therefore, we seek to be intolerant of cultural discrimination and continue to strive for access and success for all students of all capacities today and in their post-secondary lives as well.

PATS CAMP: INSPIRING FELLOWSHIP & SPORTSMANSHIP

PATS Camp makes sports dreams a reality for athletes with adaptive needs

This summer will mark the 10th annual PATS Camp, a summer program offered free of charge for children with special needs to learn about and participate in a wide variety of sports in a safe and inclusive environment. Unlike other camps offered for the special needs community, campers have a 1-on-1 Carroll student volunteer working and participating alongside their camper throughout the four days. At the end of the camp, participants have a field day filled with celebrations and a slide show of camp memories for the campers and their families.

In the camp's inaugural summer of 2014, Allie Monell '18 was eagerly awaiting to begin high school when she received the opportunity to volunteer at this new Carroll summer camp. Fellow cheerleader and upperclassmen Hannah Keller '17 was spearheading the camp. "No one really knew what it was then," recalled Monell, "but I remember how much fun we all had that year and how special it was."

Allie continued to volunteer with the PATS Camp program and was so impacted by her involvement that she eventually took over the program as its coordinator in 2022. Under her care, Allie has built on Keller's programming and has been able to work with families to provide additional accommodations for campers, including a sensory-friendly sporting experience in the auxiliary gym for campers who want to participate without all of the louder sounds typically involved in sporting fun.

Though the camp has evolved, Allie loves seeing many of their previous campers and their families return year after year to have fun. "It's something really special to watch and to see them grow over the years," said Monell. Inspired by her many years working with PATS Camp, Allie now works as an intervention specialist educator. Through this new lens, Allie now sees the camp's incredible ability to provide an opportunity for neurodivergent and neurotypical peers to form a bond and greater confidence in interacting with each other- something that is inspiring for both campers and the Patriot student volunteers.

Though her work as camp coordinator is voluntary, her yearly experiences with PATS camp are time well spent. Says Allie, "It's really rewarding to see the joy that it brings to the campers, their families, and the student volunteers. It makes it all worth it." ✚

FIVE CARROLL SENIORS EARN SPOTLIGHT FOR NATIONAL MERIT SCHOLARSHIP TEST PERFORMANCE

Kyle Heilmann and David McLoughlin are two of approximately 7,000 students in America that have qualified as National Merit Scholar® Finalists for their performances on the 2023 PSAT. These seniors will continue in the competition for National Merit Scholarships worth nearly $28 million.

Neil Tivakaran and Sydney Ramsey earned Commended Scholar status, and Alyssa Applin was chosen by the College Board for the National African American Recognition Award. This Recognition Award program grants underrepresented students with academic honors that can be included on college and scholarship applications and connects students with universities across the country, helping them meaningfully connect to colleges and stand out during the admissions process. Since 2008, Archbishop Carroll High School has helped 110 students earn the distinction of Commended Scholar, Semifinalist, or Merit Scholar through the NMS program.

GRANTS KEEP STEM LEARNING SPACE MODERN TO HELP MEET THE NEEDS OF TOMORROW

Students studying Ecology and Zoology at Carroll will continue learning about the latest innovations to one of Ohio's largest industries thanks to a state grant.

The Ohio EPA awarded Science Teacher Todd Tayloe nearly $3,500 to replace components of the hydroponic ecosystem in his classroom and purchase walleye fish, plants, food, heaters, and pumps to maintain the symbiotic environment.

Tayloe says this hands-on learning experience provides students with a look at careers in agriculture, a sector that contributes $124 billion each year to Ohio's economy.

"This is my way of teaching them the class material but adding an agricultural aspect to it," Tayloe said. "Technology and innovation keep advancing in hydroponics like anything else. This is the next round of what's coming and might keep them in Ohio and find a really good paying job."

CROSS-CURRICULAR LEARNING HIGHLIGHTS CATHOLIC SOCIAL TEACHING THROUGH LITERATURE

City of Dayton Commissioner Matt Joseph '90 joined freshman English classes for a discussion of Warren St. John's novel Outcasts United and the Welcome Dayton program for immigrants who now call Dayton home. Joseph shared how Welcome Dayton provides support to people like the refugees in the book and how the seven themes of Catholic Social Teaching call us to welcome our new neighbors.

FREEDOM PLAYERS KEEP FALL PRODUCTION IN THE FAMILY

This past fall, the Archbishop Carroll Freedom Players put on the play You Can't Take it With You. The story revolves around Alice and her quirky family, the Sycamores, and how they interact in their shared New York City apartment. When Alice wants to bring her love interest and his family home for dinner, chaos ensues.

Gabriel Lavender '24 starred as Sycamore family patriarch, Paul, and reflected on his own family. "I used what I learned from my father and grandfather," Lavender said of his inspiration for the role and in life. He also received support from his mother. "I also want to thank my mom for telling me to always try my best at everything in life, as without her encouragement, I doubt I would have joined drama club in the first place," Lavender said.

MARCHING PATRIOTS HIT A HIGH NOTE WITH REGIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP

For the first time in more than three decades, the Marching Patriots finished in first place in a Bands of America competition.

The band and guard took the top spot at the Bands of America Central Ohio Regional Championship in the 1A division with their show, Open Mic as well as a second place finish at the Mid States Band Association Championships. The show featured arrangements of jazz hits that displayed soloist skills of individual musicians.

The Marching Patriots capped off their season with a performance at Bands of America Grand Nationals in Indianapolis and a weeklong trip to Orlando in December for a clinic with musicians at Walt Disney World.

CARROLL JUNIORS EARN 14 SCHOLASTIC ART AWARDS

Four members of the Class of 2025 combined to earn 14 Scholastic Awards for the 2024 academic year. Allison Arias-Rodriguez '25, Collette Merland '25, Allison Walls '25, and Tessa Zimmerman '25 won seven honorable mentions, six Silver Key Awards, and one Gold Key Award. Zimmerman's Gold Key Award piece Not Everything is Black and White will go on to be judged at the final, national level of the Scholastic Art Awards for a chance to be displayed in New York City this summer.

The regional Scholastic Art Award winners were displayed at the K12 Art Gallery in Dayton from February 3 - 24 with a special ceremony for the regional Scholastic Art Award winners on February 24.

The Scholastic Art & Writing Awards were founded in 1923 and have inspired bold ideas in creative teens throughout the country. Award recipients through the years have included greats like Andy Warhol and Ezra Jack Keats.

SERVICE

SERVICE AND GRATITUDE: A RECIPE FOR SUCCESS

The Military Kids Club and Women's Basketball program partnered to bring some holiday cheer to the men and women of the US Air Force this Christmas season. The groups combined to bake nearly 400 dozen Christmas cookies and donated them to the Wright Patterson Air Force Base USO Office.

“We try to help members feel like they have a family here at Carroll. Some people may only get a semester or year at Carroll, so we want to make sure they have a good experience and a place to call home.”

-Coleman Fox '24

BROTHERLY LOVE FOR CARROLL'S COURTYARD

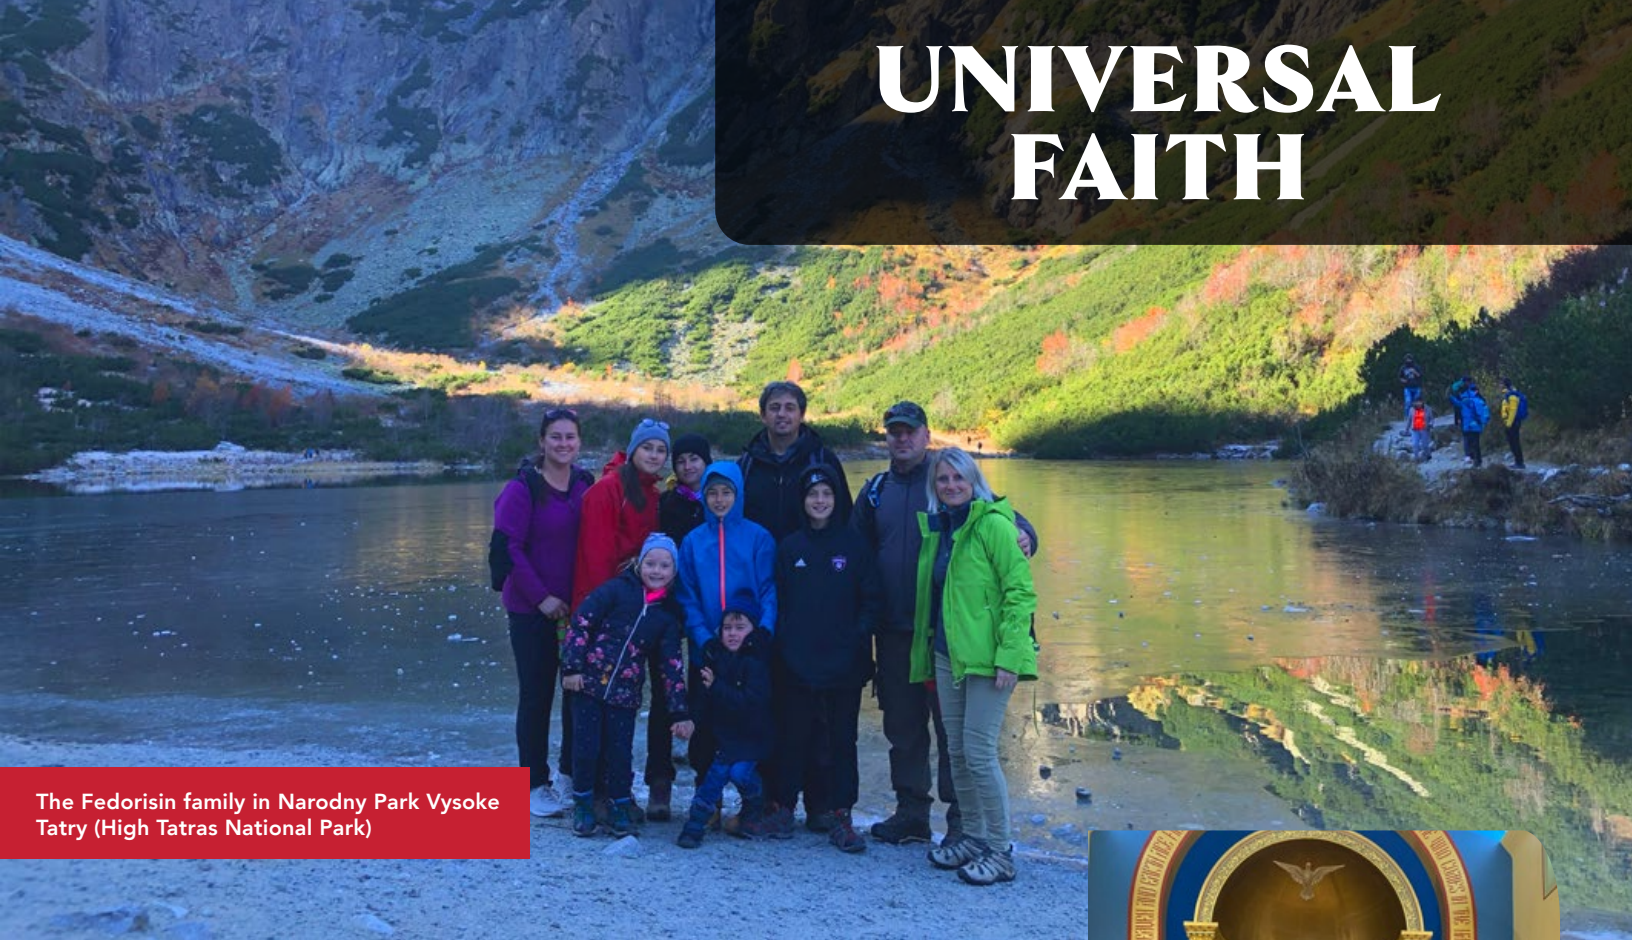

Twin brothers Jacob '24 and Zach Perkins '24 teamed up to clean up Carroll's cafeteria courtyard this fall.

The Perkins brothers split duties to make the area a more welcoming place on the Carroll campus. Jake cleared out overgrowth then replaced it with new and salvaged plants. Zach used his carpentry skills to build a bench and new wooden shelter to house the statue of the Virgin Mother.

UNIVERSAL FAITH

The Fedorisin family in Narodny Park Vysoke Tatry (High Tatras National Park)

The most common things make the biggest difference when you're 4,800 miles from home.

"I was surprised by how big the roads and the cars are in America," Noemi Fedorisinova '26 recalled – just one of many eye-opening experiences from when she and her family arrived in the United States from their native Slovakia. Unlike many families who left eastern Europe in 2022, Noemi, her sister Sofia '24, their parents, and their brothers were not fleeing the burgeoning war between Russia and Ukraine. Their father, Francis, is a Byzantine Catholic Priest who had been urged by a bishop in 2019 to relocate his family to the United States to help grow their ministry.

The family spent months in deliberation and prayer to make a decision. They ultimately decided to leave behind their comfortable lives in Slovakia to answer the bishop's call of spreading their faith. The onset of the COVID-19 pandemic put their plans on hold, but the family arrived in Charlotte after a 24 hour journey from Budapest.

"There was also sadness because I had made good friends and was in a good high school community," Sofia said. "It's important for our family to make decisions together and make sacrifices for the church and our faith. It's important to be able to sacrifice even the great life that we had in Europe. Everything was perfect there, but we sacrificed it to help people here."

After adjusting to the weather, tweaking their English dialect from British to American, and bouncing from Charlotte to Cleveland to Dayton, the family settled into their new life.

"For my first three months of school, I was just sitting and doing nothing because I was so stressed. I tried to speak, but it was bad. Then when I went to high school, I started to talk and make friends and things got better. The teachers are always trying to help you, and I really appreciate that."

Sofia and Noemi also learned about the differences between the Roman Catholic and Byzantine traditions while attending Catholic schools. Their father leads the St. Barbara the Great

The Fedorisin family gathered in the Dormition of Mother of God, Byzantine Catholic Church in Cleveland.

Byzantine Catholic Community and is the officiant for its services in St. John Bosco Chapel on the campus of Wright State University. For all of the differences in rites, Sofia says the commonalities are much greater than what distinguishes the two ways of practicing faith.

"Everything that we do in the Byzantine church is based on the Roman Catholic Church. We are Catholic. We are united."

I'm so happy that people of all abilities are able to enjoy the events at the new Archbishop Carroll stadium. It's wonderful that Carroll's stadium is now accessible for all people and that people of all abilities can be included.

Gretchen's Pavilion

Made possible by the generosity of Bart and Marge Barthelemy to honor their granddaughter Gretchen Braun and to create a welcoming space where all can gather and cheer on the Patriots.

Dr. Bob "Bart" and Marge Barthelemy with granddaughter Gretchen at Gretchen's Pavillion

WELCOME TO GRETCHEN'S PAVILLION

Dr. Robert 'Bart' Barthelemy and his wife Marge's generous contributions to Archbishop Carroll High School over the years have not only left a lasting mark on the institution but have also transformed the experience for countless individuals.

These current Carroll grandparents and parents of alumni already supported academics in a major way through gifts to the Patriot Fund and science lab renovations. Now, a new set of bleachers, complete with a fully accessible ramp and pavilion for visitors in wheelchairs, now stands as a testament to inclusivity and accessibility at Carroll.

For many, including his granddaughter Gretchen and wife Marge, the impact of this thoughtful gift extends beyond the physical structure. In the words of Dr. Barthelemy, "At last, we are able to wheel Gretchen into the bleachers where we can see the entire field and watch our Carroll Patriot teams perform."

This newly accessible space not only enhances the enjoyment of sporting events but also provides a sense of belonging for everyone, regardless of their mobility needs. Moreover, Dr. Barthelemy's generosity has extended to the comfort and safety of older Carroll Patriot fans, offering them a secure means to access the grandstand. This addition not only meets practical needs but also symbolizes a commitment to fostering a welcoming and supportive environment for all members of the

Carroll community. In the spirit of gratitude, Dr. Barthelemy shares, "What a great addition to our favorite high school."

His philanthropic gesture has undoubtedly enriched the Carroll experience for current and future generations, ensuring that the school remains a place where everyone can come together, celebrate, and support their beloved Patriot teams.

WHY I GIVE: ART WOODALL •

Archbishop Carroll High School is privileged to have the steadfast support of many donors, but few as committed as Art Woodall, whose deep connection with our institution spans generations. He is the benefactor responsible for the impressive new Woodall Family Pressbox at Patriot Stadium.

Jake Reuter '22, Pat Quinn, Kate Reuter '20, Laura (Woodall) Reuter '90, Chris Reuter, Art Woodall, Autumn Berwanger '30, Julia Berwanger '28, and Charlotte (Woodall) Berwanger '94 at the pressbox dedication ceremony.

01 Patriot Patriarch

Though Art is a proud Chaminade High School grad, he is a true Patriot Family Patriarch. Art's journey with Carroll began when his daughters Laura (Woodall) Reuter '90, and Charlotte (Woodall) Berwanger '94 became Patriots. His commitment grew alongside his family as his grandchildren Kate Reuter '20 and Jacob Reuter '22 started their high school years at Carroll. Art eagerly anticipates becoming future Carroll grandparent once again when Julia Berwanger '28 and Autumn Berwanger '30 enroll as students.

02 Charity as a Priority

The spirit of charity runs deep in the Woodall family. Art reminisces about snow days when Laura spearheaded a donation drive for St. Vincent DePaul Food Pantry and Homeless Shelter as a Carroll senior. Instead of enjoying a day off, Laura exemplified the selflessness instilled in her through the strong Catholic faith formation received at Carroll. Art attributes his ongoing support to the impactful education and values instilled in his daughters during their time at Carroll.

03 Building Momentum

Art's granddaughter Kate was a sophomore at Carroll when the Foundation for the Future campaign launched. As Art observed the transformative impact of the campaign, he witnessed the significant improvements it brought to the campus and educational experience at Carroll. The upgraded facilities, enhanced programs, and expanded opportunities for students left an indelible mark on Art, reinforcing his belief in the importance of investing in the future of our school.

04 Lasting Legacy

The Woodall family's commitment to philanthropy is a testament to the lasting influence of Archbishop Carroll High School on its students. In a fitting tribute to the Woodalls' commitment to Carroll, the new stadium pressbox dedicated during Homecoming Weekend 2023 bears the family name. This lasting monument stands as a testament to Art Woodall's unwavering commitment to Carroll and his belief in the transformative power of our community. Archbishop Carroll High School extends its deepest gratitude to Art Woodall and his family for their continued support. Their legacy of generosity serves as an inspiration to us all, embodying the spirit of community and compassion that defines the Carroll experience.

MEET ISAIAH TAYLOR '14

How a Carroll alumnus is helping change the landscape of diversity and inclusion

“Stand on the shoulders of giants” is a common phrase to anyone who is preparing to defend research or a thesis to earn an advanced degree. For Isaiah Taylor '14, that type of foundational support extends beyond his doctoral studies and into the future of the next generation of learners from underrepresented backgrounds.

Taylor researches the effects of microgravity on bone cells, working towards a PhD in molecular and cellular pharmacology at Stony Brook University. In addition to the challenges of conducting advanced research and maintaining a work/life balance, Taylor is one of the leading voices for diversity and inclusion on campus. Stony Brook's most recent report says that approximately 12% of all of its students are African American, and Taylor says he is the only one in his PhD program.

As president of Stony Brook's Black Graduate Student Organization, Taylor leads the way in rebuilding the group's impact on campus as it relaunched this past fall after the COVID-19 pandemic derailed much of campus life. He also works part time for the DICE (Diversity, Intercultural and Community Engagement) Program in Stony Brook's Division of Student Affairs. According to their website, DICE's mission is to “provide programs to maintain an all-inclusive campus community where diversity is valued and celebrated, and where a positive campus climate is promoted. The office helps to foster a campus environment that is welcoming, nurturing, and supportive for all members of the university.” Taylor also served as peer mentor in the Office of Multicultural Affairs as an undergraduate at the University of Dayton.

Building relationships and providing an example for young learners of all races is of the utmost importance to Taylor after experiencing the impact a mentor can have.

“About two summers ago, I got to participate in this program called Scientists in Mentoring. It was a diverse and inclusive program, and I got a mentor from Johnson & Johnson who told me about her path. She helped me figure out where I want to go after graduation. That program helped me realize that no matter where I’m working, I still want to be involved in some sort of diversity and inclusion program. There should be more people of color in graduate school and professional school. It’s very important for development starting from a young age. A lot of schools are predominately white institutions, so having representation is important because kids now and in college want to see an example. If there is no representation in these roles, maybe they get discouraged or have imposter syndrome. It’s important for us growing up and even in college to see other people do it.”

Providing opportunities to build a network of peers can lighten the burden of managing difficult classes, long days of experiments and research in the labs, and the stresses of daily life. Taylor says his time playing sports and participating in clubs as a student at Carroll provided him a sense of belonging as a teenager and provided a sense of belonging in the community.

Taylor also carries the academic and spiritual foundations of a Carroll education with him to this day. He credits his difficult course load from high school with giving him an edge once he arrived in college. His faith is reflected in the work he does outside of the research labs to bring about positive change and a more just society. Ensuring that diversity and representation are present in daily life are critical pillars of Catholic Social Teaching, and Taylor says that all institutions, including the church, must continue progressing with those values at the forefront of their missions. ✝

“When I was growing up, no one I knew was doing what I’m doing, and that shouldn’t be the case. Representation is important so that dreams and goals we have when we’re young, we can actually turn them into reality.”

Carroll Intervention Specialists Emily Fogus, Allison Ford, Stephanie (Pugar) Sagasser '08 and Ben Swick

MOD SQUAD

Intervention specialists inspire Patriot learners to overcome learning challenges

After four years of rigorous academic work, an Archbishop Carroll High School Diploma represents mastery at the end of a student’s high school career. For some students, achieving that diploma comes with additional challenges beyond the coursework itself. This is where the intervention specialists come in to assist students with diverse learning needs to make walking across the stage at graduation an achievable goal.

The four intervention specialists, lovingly referred to as the “MOD Squad” for the group’s location in a modular building, each handle a caseload of 12-16 students who need assistance in various ways. Each of these students has an Individualized Education Plan (IEP), which is a legal document that affords students the opportunity to receive specially designed instruction. This is developed through collaboration with the students’ parents/guardians, classroom teachers, related services, and the home school district. This document ensures the students receive the academic, emotional, and/or behavioral support they need to be successful.

With the help of scholarships such as the Jon Peterson Scholarship, intervention specialist Stephanie (Pugar) Sagasser ‘08 has seen programming and funding greatly increase in the private school system and at Carroll. “I grew up in Catholic schools, and intervention programs have grown so much since that time,” she said. “It’s great to see students who learn differently have an opportunity to have their needs met within a Catholic school setting.”

Sagasser knew she always wanted to be a teacher, but it wasn’t until her first placement as a University of Dayton student teacher that she realized that working with students with special needs was where she was called to serve. “I fell in love with it,” she recalled.

Since that first placement, she has had an opportunity to work with students of varying ability in K-12th grade classroom settings. From students who need full individualized instruction to those who have met their goals and need minimal support, Sagasser has worked with a wide variety of students, each with different, individual needs.

Along with Ben Swick, Allison Ford, and Emily Fogus, Carroll’s other intervention specialists, Sagasser tackles busy days filled with different challenges and circumstances. They work with small groups of students in the modular unit that provides a safe space to care for students and further assist them with their studies. Not only is the team checking in with students on their caseload, but they are collaborating with the general education teachers in the building and working with them in many different ways. The IEP and 504 paperwork is created, reviewed, and documented by the four intervention specialists. Some students are in a general education classroom that is co-taught by a general education teacher and an intervention specialist in order to provide daily assistance in a mainstream classroom. Days are so busy that lunchtime is often used for department check-ins and teacher collaboration.

Like the general education teachers, the intervention specialists prepare their students for life after high school. The intervention team works to not only reinforce the students' curriculum and classroom lessons, but they also teach the students to advocate for themselves. "When students leave high school, they need to be able to advocate for what they need since an IEP does not follow them after they graduate," explains Mrs. Sagasser. In addition to self-advocacy, the intervention specialists focus on teaching their students independent living skills including organization, time management, and personal finance, to name a few.

While some students will remain on an IEP for their entire high school career, many no longer are in need of their specially designed instruction, moments that the MOD Squad celebrates with the student and the team. At that final meeting, the student and his/her team looks back on all of the progress from the student's academic career and celebrates how far that student has come to get to this point. Mrs. Sagasser shared how "intensely gratifying" that meeting is for all involved. "To be able to sit in a meeting and only focus on the positive is refreshing and rewarding."

The biggest reward for Sagasser has been to watch those students she has worked with for their entire high school career shake hands with Principal Matt Sableski '91 at graduation and receive their Archbishop Carroll High School diploma. "Some students have had a challenging road," she recalls, "It's academically difficult, and they made it."

Now, with a Carroll diploma in hand, students who once had to overcome various challenges are now making a difference and finding success. Sagasser has former students keeping in touch and filling her in on all of their achievements as adults in the career world, and that is a motivation for Sagasser and the MOD Squad. "(They're) out in the world doing so well, and it's so good to see that."

Sagasser works with students individually and in group settings as an Intervention Specialist

STUDENTS. COMMUNITY. ENGAGEMENT.

New group promotes student inclusivity on and off campus.

With the rise of hate rhetoric and division in the world, both students and teachers at Archbishop Carroll wanted to create a more positive, inclusive way to celebrate diversity and to engage in peaceful encounters with others- both at school and in the community. This led Carroll's Director of Community Engagement and Inclusion, Mrs. Tara Ashworth and fellow teachers Mr. Erik Ramsey '93 (Social Studies), and Mr. Ben Swick (Intervention Specialist) to create one of the newest club offerings, the Student Community Engagement Committee (SCEC).

The SCEC meets once a month during lunch and provides an opportunity for students to have small group discussions and "break bread together" by partaking in a culturally-responsive meal from various local, multicultural restaurants. Julia Dunlap '24 recognizes the need to continue building an inclusive environment and gained new perspectives from just the few gatherings the committee has had so far. Dunlap recalled being surprised to find out that a fellow classmate did not like bread or potatoes – two things that are in Julia's usual cuisine – because they are not commonly eaten in Julia's friend's culture. "I want to learn new things about how I can be a better person in the world and how I can support my peers who are different from me," said Julia.

Dunlap and fellow committee members have had a chance to not only learn from their teachers and peers, but the SCEC invites guest speakers to discuss diversity in culture, religion, and diversity of ability, and other topics. So far, they have heard from Dr. Renate Frydman, a Holocaust survivor, and Beth Gaertner, with the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Already, the students and teachers are producing tangible ways they can provide positive outreach to the entire student body in the near future, including a new social studies course offering for next year, created and taught by Ramsey, that focuses on the diversity of the United States. "It is evident that our students are passionate about ensuring that everyone feels a safe sense of belonging and a purpose on our campus," said Ashworth.

While the committee is still in its infancy, Ashworth is already witnessing the fruits of the committee's gatherings thus far, saying, "These conversations and presentations have fostered impactful conversations among the young people in this building that will help unite our community and make a difference in our world." ✝

STUDENT REFLECTION | MEET NEIL TIVAKARAN '24

Throughout my four years at Archbishop Carroll High School, I have recognized that community lies at the core of each class, sport, and extracurricular activity. From day one, Carroll embraces each student, ensuring that they find a home in the diverse and accepting student body. It is this aspect of unity that I find so appealing.

From the moment I walked into Carroll as a freshman, I was immediately welcomed by students and faculty members. Their enthusiastic introductions reassured me that my next four years would be filled with smiles and laughs, and I was quickly enveloped by the unique culture at Carroll. A defining trait of Archbishop Carroll High School is its House System, which allows students to engage with each other on a more personal level. I especially enjoyed each student-led game or discussion in Family Room, as these daily activities allowed me to connect with peers of all grade levels and recognize our shared interests.

Carroll encourages students to not only be excited to learn but also to be immersed in extracurricular clubs and athletics. Through my four years on the track and cross-country teams, I was afforded the opportunity to grow closer to teammates outside the classroom, which further exposed me to the diverse student body here at Carroll.

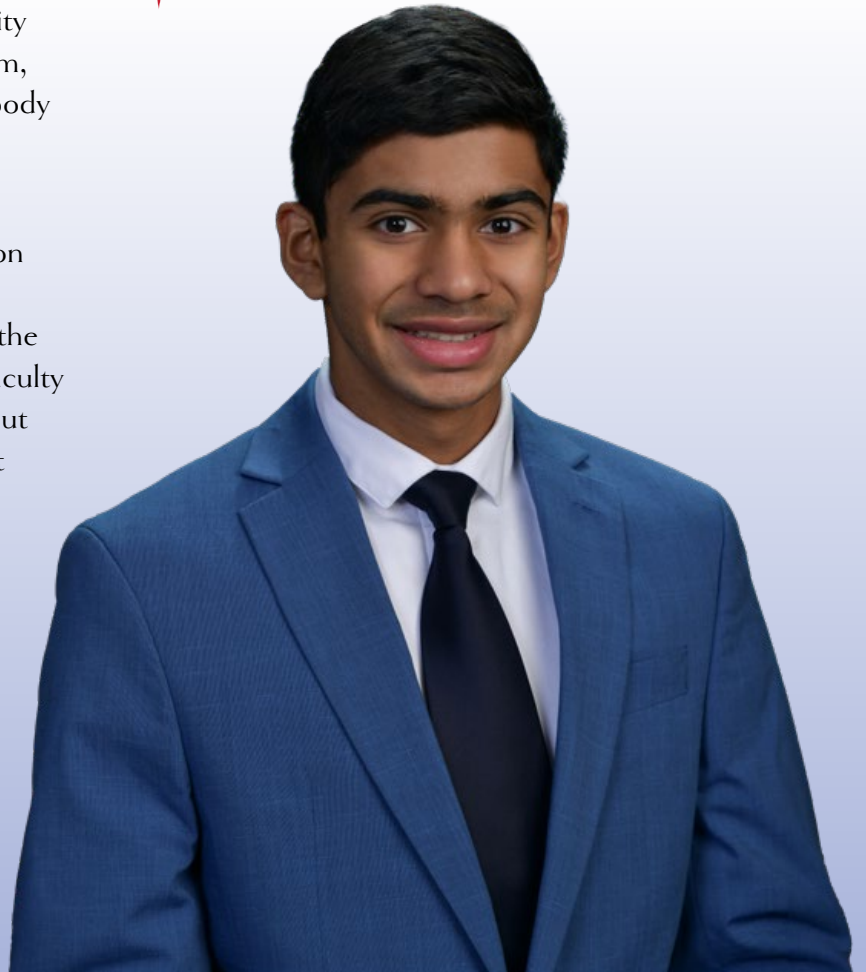

During my senior year, I also joined the newly-established Community Engagement and Inclusion Committee. Our monthly luncheons featured discussions about diversity here at Carroll and in the broader community as well. Composed of both faculty and students, this forum allowed me to speak about my own experiences concerning the entire student body and potential ways to highlight inclusivity on Carroll's campus. From the first-ever committee meeting, we jumped right into a book about prejudice and discrimination. Although certainly difficult topics to discuss, I was excited that these relevant and current issues were not only being talked about at school, but that we as students could be part of their solution. Guest lecturers were also invited to speak about creating a more collaborative and unified learning environment at Carroll, and a quote from our most recent speaker, "No baby is born to hate," has remained with me months later. By serving on the Community Engagement and Inclusion Committee, I have learned how discrimination can be prevented by improving awareness of different cultures and viewpoints and facilitating more supportive communication between individuals.

My experiences at Carroll have helped me realize the value of diversity and inclusivity in our society. I am thankful to experience this welcoming atmosphere at Carroll, whether during class presentations, club meetings, sports practices, or even just saying hello to a peer in the hallway. Carroll not only recognizes, but embraces its diversity, providing a welcoming and safe home for students to meet other similarly-motivated and driven peers who desire to be changemakers, both inside our school community and beyond.

ALL DAYS, ALWAYS

The best way to experience a new culture is through immersion. Spanish students enjoyed a view of the pitch at Camp Nou, the home of soccer powerhouse FC Barcelona, in 2013. The ten day tour of Spain also included stops in Valencia, Granada, Costa del Sol, and Madrid.
