Fellow Patriots,

St. Thomas Aquinas once said that, “There is nothing on this earth more to be prized than true friendship.” Carroll High School has been a place where many of us, myself included, have found lifelong friendships and mentors that have supported us and guided us along our journey towards Christ. As we enter a new decade, I look forward to seeing how our students, staff, and Carroll community will stand together and work towards bringing God’s love into the world.

Our students go above and beyond to answer the call to be a companion for those in great need in our community. They give back, not because we ask them to, but because they feel inspired to serve all of God’s people. Our Patriots sacrifice thousands of hours helping others both off and on campus, and they challenge their peers to do the same.

We at Carroll are excited to see our alma mater advancing and updating to accommodate for future generations of Patriots. Thanks to the tremendous success of our first ever Day of Giving and the continuous support of our Foundation for the Future capital campaign, we look forward to seeing our school become a companion that supports the continuously-advancing, globalized education our students receive.

After visiting the National Shrine of St. Elizabeth Ann Seton, the pioneer for Catholic education in America, I was inspired to bring back her teachings to be a companion for our staff this year. Mother Seton believed that a school should be a model of Christ and His teachings. She used marigolds, a plant known for encouraging companion plants to grow while protecting them from weeds and pests, as an example for Catholic educators. As you’ll read in this edition of Reflections, Mother Seton and her marigolds are continuously guiding our teachers to support one another as they foster faith and academics within our students and greater Carroll community.

With this new decade upon us, we are challenged to be like Mother Seton’s marigolds. May our school be a place where the seeds of faith and wisdom are fostered. May our Patriot Family, like those marigolds, strive to be a nurturing companion for our current and future Patriots so that they will one day be a shining light in our world.

The 2020s will be a great decade to be a Patriot!

Sincerely,

Matthew Sableski '91

HOUSE KEEPING

What's new in our House.

🏠 BALTIMORE

Baltimore has had quite a year so far. We came together to finish in second place in the Lip Sync Battle with our performance of The Beach Boys' hit "Surfin' U.S.A." and continue to show spirit after four years with the House System. At the beginning of the school year, Baltimore gathered as a whole for the first time and allowed everyone to get to know others in the House. We are a family, and we are working as hard as possible to show it.

Not only is Baltimore doing well as a whole, but we also have some extraordinary people in our House. Kevin Agnew '21 from Family Room 107 had an absolutely fantastic Cross Country season, helping to push the varsity team to 7th at the state championship meet. Kevin placed 1st in five different meets this year, including the GCL, Regional, and District Championships. - Michael Taylor '20

🏠 CHARITY

Charity House has been hard at work throughout the first semester. Beginning with the Cheer Competition, Charity brought home the "W," finishing in first place. There was great participation and enthusiasm in showing our House spirit. Also, a number of our House members have finished up their fall sports seasons, participated in the fall play, and are well into their winter sports seasons.

Many students are also excelling academically. Will Moddeman '20 is an outstanding student athlete who is dedicated and determined when it comes to his studies. His test score of a 33 on the ACT was greatly deserved as he is a lock down student and still finds time to participate in other school activities and clubs. Congrats, Will! - Jill Roberts '20

🏠 GONZAGA

Sarah Ruetschle '21 is a legacy student who contributes to Gonzaga in a number of ways, including her participation in House Events and her attitude towards helping others during Academic Day. She truly embodies Gonzaga's motto of "God, Grace, Giving and Gratitude", especially through the community service she does.

Some of the places where Sarah actively volunteers are her church, St. Luke in Beavercreek, and her local library. She has received the Ambassador's Award for service and has the most service hours of any Gonzaga member. She is an important member of Carroll's Academic Team, Swim Team, and Pats 4 Life. She is also a member of National Honor Society and Latin Honor Society. - Madeleine Sanders '20

🏠 MERCY

Joshua Vagedes '20 embodies the spirit of Mercy House. From volunteering to help with the Cheer Competition to helping with the Lip Sync House Event, Josh is always excited to contribute to Mercy House. A member of Family Room 204, he is a senior who takes his passion for the House System and puts it to use. Julia Nemeth '20, his Family Room Captain, says, "Josh is always ready to volunteer. He always tries his hardest to support our Family Room and House." Mercy chose "I Want It That Way" by the Backstreet Boys for the second quarter Lip Sync Battle, and Josh was one of the planners who helped with everything for his Family Room and Mercy. - Summer Medina '20

🏠 ST. MARY'S

This year, St. Mary's has had a lot of great moments. At the beginning of the school year, everyone welcomed the incoming freshmen and transfer students, the whole house has done a really great job of supporting each other. One of the greatest achievements for this year was the first House event. Everyone was very spirited and thrilled to show our House pride! Finishing in third place was a sign that we had a lot to look forward to!

Not only has the House had great success, but it also has had some outstanding people. Jessica Babros '20 is one of our Family Room Captains who was already achieved so much this year. She has held many leadership positions and is involved in many activities. Jessica was a Women's Varsity Soccer Team Manager and is a Co-President of the Spanish Club. As of now, she is also very active with the community and gives her time by doing service. Jessica has earned the Ambassador Award this year for her service and plans to continue serving others while showing great leadership for our house! - Janelle Soto '20

🏠 TRINITY

Trinity House has had a great start to this school year! We started off strong in the first House Event and ended up winning the Lip Sync Battle with our performance of the "Best Song Ever" by One Direction. Paige Bey '20 had an active role in participating in this competition and has had four outstanding years at Carroll High School. She is a member of Family Room 310 and is actively involved in the Carroll community. She is an exceptional volleyball player and made the varsity team two years in a row. Paige has chosen to serve her country and join the Army National Guard after high school while attending Wright State University for ROTC. - JC Copley '20

SPOTLIGHTS on our Patriot Student Community

A brief look at some of the current highlights from within and around our amazing student community.

ACADEMICS

» Finite math inspiring infinite possibilities for students

For many seniors, thinking about their plans once they graduate Carroll seems exciting and possibly a bit daunting. “A lot of us don’t know what we’re doing,” said Jackson Stanard ‘20, “but, we’re seniors, so we’ve got to figure it out.” So, when Jackson’s Finite Math completed a project, focusing on career budgeting, he and his peers received valuable tools to help refine and direct their career paths.

Under the instruction of Ms. Sarah Lesiak, Stanard’s Finite Math class participated in a career budgeting unit where the students researched professional areas of interest and applied the mathematical formulas necessary to budget their financial and lifestyle needs accordingly. “What was nice about the budget project was that it gave me a taste of careers I might be interested in,” Jackson said. “I was able to find out what would be a good career fit for me and what would be profitable.”

For Jackson, this unit proved to be helpful right away, as he already is an entrepreneur. His mother Jerri owns K12 Gallery & TEJAS. Not only has Jackson been managing a group of interns and helping out with classes offered there, but he also owns soda and gumball machines within the gallery. After his class project, he modified the design of his soda vending machine. The new design attracted more customers and increased Jackson’s revenue.

“I do find myself using the equations (from class),” Jackson said, including those formulas necessary for taxes, tips, and sales tax. The material from class complements students’ daily lives and has helped provide students like Jackson with relevant, valuable life-budgeting skills.

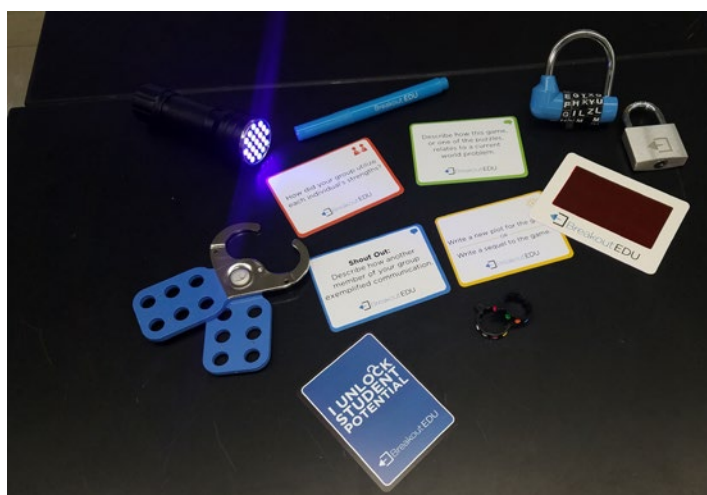

For now, Jackson is still deciding whether he will pursue his business, graphic design, or journalism interests. However, regardless of the path he chooses, he now has the tools necessary to be successful and financially plan for a bright future.

» Chemistry classes “breaking out” for breakthrough results through Innovative Teaching Grant

During her time student teaching in an Honors Biology class, Science teacher Ms. Meghan Mulligan saw her Cooperating Teacher’s students partake in an interactive project using Breakout Boxes. Much like the popular breakout room experiences, students had to decipher clues, solve puzzles, and work through activities in order to break out and unlock a box containing a study guide and/or a reward. While working for the prize, students didn’t realize that the ultimate prize was the content-related knowledge needed to unlock the clues along the way.

Mulligan saw great student achievement when using the Breakout Boxes, so she began to look for ways to acquire the system for her own classroom. Thanks to an Innovative Teaching Grant from the Archdiocese of Cincinnati, Mulligan was able to purchase the Breakout Boxes to use in her Chemistry 101 and AP Chemistry classes.

“It makes your classroom an escape room,” Mulligan explains. “Clues can be hidden throughout the room or students can be given problems using colors, numbers, and words to figure out the codes to the locks.” The boxes contain many pieces that excite students and game-lovers alike. There are word puzzles, which Mulligan uses to promote mastery of key vocabulary, UV lights to reveal hidden codes or clues, and other engaging activities. “I like to use (the Breakout Boxes) for review at the end of a unit,” she said.

Mulligan has found that using these materials has promoted out-of-the-box thinking and a relatable, engaging way to access the more difficult concepts covered in her classes. “Students who often struggle with math or science really excel at this avenue of application,” Mulligan explained, “It gives them an opportunity to be a leader for once.”

Not only is Mulligan looking forward to using the Breakout Boxes, but she is excited to share her materials with her colleagues teaching other subjects at Carroll. “(These activities) are not unique to science,” she notes. “They can be used in any subject or on a larger scale in a House competition.”

ART

» The Freedom Players “Family” revives a family tale

As the oldest student organization at Carroll, the Drama Club has always been a source of camaraderie for cast and crew alike. “We’re all one big group of friends,” said Becca Jobe ‘21, “We make one big family that works together as a team,” and they did just that this past November in their production of The Little Dog Laughed.

First performed on the Carroll stage in 1963, The Little Dog Laughed is an enduring story of a family in 1940’s small town USA. “Drama Club was quite literally a family in this production,” remarked Emma Howey ‘20, who played matriarch Martha Huntington. The story focuses on Martha’s daughter, Laurie (Bre DeVellier ‘20), a college sophomore psychology student, who comes home for the summer and can’t resist analyzing her family, friends, and even her mother’s tea party guests. She has turned the house into an experimental maze and her family into an emotional mess.

Under the direction of Toni (Hemmert) Weitz ‘86 and featuring the set design of Andrew Becker ‘09 and Josh Weitz ‘09, the Freedom Players family brought an onstage family to life and warmed the hearts of audience members young and old.

The Freedom Players will perform their spring production of Bye Bye Birdie on March 20-22nd.

» Carroll Freedom Players’ Oklahoma! lassoes more accolades

Congratulations to the Carroll Freedom Players for receiving yet another award for the musical this past March. The Dayton Daily News named Oklahoma! as a contender for the Best of Dayton Theatre for the 2018-19 season. This included any local or regional production to play in Dayton. Carroll’s performance was the only high school to be recognized in this group. Congratulations, Freedom Players!

» Marching Patriots return to AAA competition

Led by Drum Major Jackson Mitchell ‘20, the band and guard hit the road with their show “JoyRide.” The Marching Patriots finished as the top-rated Ohio school in both the Bands of America Regional Championships in Muncie, Ind. and Mid States Band Associations AAA Championships. The final stop on their tour was the Bands of America Grand National Championships at Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis. The band will take one more voyage this spring when they travel to perform at Walt Disney World in Orlando, Florida.

» Carroll student wears his art on his sleeve

Andy Warhol once said, “Everything has its beauty, but not everyone sees it.” Trey Blevins ‘20 is helping his classmates see that beauty by making his art clearly visible - on the of the Patriot student body. Since the seventh grade, Blevins has been creating designs and screen printing them on apparel. As an AP Art student, Trey is refining his craft, creating his own business, and sharing it with his peers.

“My dad owns a screen printing company, so it was always very easily accessible,” Blevins said. His father, Larry, owns Green Leaf Printing & Design in downtown Dayton, and he has been utilizing Trey’s artistic talents from an early age. “If his designer was busy or if he needed some artwork, he would talk to me, and I’d do it,” said Trey. Soon, Trey began creating designs of his own, like one inspired by an internet joke popular his 8th grade year at Ascension. They were a hit, and that lead Blevins to continue his business upon entering Carroll.

Trey is pioneering the way for young designers at Carroll as the first student graphic shirt artist. Likewise, he is the first student to have shirt designs on display in the Carroll lobby. “It’s fun,” Trey said, “No one else has done it, so I have a bit of a monopoly on it.” Having sold more than 200 shirts, Trey is always ready with spare order forms to sell another shirt. With AP Art Teacher Renee Merland’s guidance, Trey focused on his designs as his concentration in class, allowing him to make more complex pieces.

The more Blevins delves into the artistic and business processes, the more he finds himself using the tools he accumulated from his Carroll classes. “I’ll be working down (at Green Leaf), and I’ll remember something from class,” Trey said, “I’ll think, Oh, I’m utilizing that right now,” especially skills from his art, business, and STEM classes.

Trey has found inspiration for his designs in all areas of his life. He had finished an exam early freshman year and happened to have two sharpies on hand to draw a whale that made one of his shirts. Another, a bird, was designed simply through Blevins improvising. The design of a planet with a city was inspired by the song “City of Stars” from the film, La La Land.

Similar to the characters in La La Land, Trey also plans to move to Los Angeles and pursue a career in filmmaking after graduation, to take his art from screen print to silver screen.

SERVICE

» Inspired, not Required: Carroll senior gives 653 hours of service to Dayton community

For Brittney Sargent ‘20, giving back to her community has always been a priority. Sargent has always felt called to serve others in any way she can. So far, during her time at Carroll, Brittney has logged 653 hours serving her community, and she has no plans to stop anytime soon.

Brittney has been involved with the Greene County 4H Club since the third grade. From rabbits to chickens to her dog Holly, a huge Newfoundland, Brittney has been raising and showing animals since she was eight years old. As president of her chapter, she motivates her peers to go above and beyond to give back to the community in other areas as well. Cooking and serving meals to those at The Caring Place and making snack bags for at-risk youth are just a few ways in which she and her peers are helping make a difference.

As a senior, Brittney has found several ways to give back with her Patriot peers. This past fall, Sargent participated in Action Appalachia, where she and 25 of her senior classmates traveled to Kentucky with donations to help the community of Campton. “Going on that trip was really eye-opening and inspirational for me,” Brittney said.

Brittney has been involved in many projects, but her favorite so far has been her time volunteering as a greeter at Soin Medical Center in Beavercreek. There, she welcomes patients and families, often escorting nervous patients via wheelchair to their appointments in the hospital. “I’m able to be their reassurance that everything’s going to be okay,” said Sargent, “I’m the first face you see when you walk into the hospital.”

Brittney knows first-hand how comforting a smiling face in the hospital can be. In March of 2018, her mother was diagnosed with breast cancer. “My community surrounded me and my family with so much love and support,” she recalled, “I want to give that to others.” Thankfully, Brittney’s mother has won her cancer battle, and Brittney has found a calling to enter into the medical field to help provide care to patients in the future.

Sargent’s service hour goal has also been inspired by the outstanding Carroll seniors who have come before her. As an underclassman, she sat with her peers at the senior awards assemblies, hearing the large numbers of hours that the class of 2017 gave to the community during their time at Carroll. Like those influential seniors before her, Brittney wants to be a role model to her underclassmen peers and inspire them to top her hours.

Though Brittney has logged 653 hours during her time at Carroll, she hopes to reach 700 before graduation. “I’ve put so many hours into my community- a community that has given me so much,” she said, “They really inspire me to give them back as many hours as they have given me.”

» Carroll hosts Family Fun Day for foster families

Carroll High School has always been a second home to Kelly Walsh ‘83. As an adoption worker for Montgomery County Childrens’ Services, she and her colleagues were looking for a safe, welcoming place for children to meet potential foster and adoptive families. So, when brainstorming where to host a Family Fun Day and how to get the community involved, Carroll was one of the first places to come to mind.

Walsh, along with her husband Jim ‘83 and and their children, have always been connected to the Patriot family and known the support and generosity the community provides.

Six years ago, Kelly reached out to Carroll religion teacher Melissa (Balsom) Fisher ‘83 to get the Patriot community involved. Fisher, who adopted her son Wesley through Montgomery County Children’s Services, knew firsthand how Carroll could provide a positive, memorable experience for these new families. Carroll has hosted the event every year since.

This year, families who are becoming licensed foster or adoptive parents were invited to meet 35 of the children available for adoption in the area. Some children, already with placements, met their new families for the first time at this event. With the help of Carroll students like Micah Kilby ‘22, families participated in holiday-themed activities together, such as decorating stockings. “I used to have foster siblings,” said Kilby, “It’s nice to help families out and see the kids getting adopted and having fun.”

“Carroll has done such a wonderful job being so incredibly generous, and I’ve received nothing but praise about the student volunteers for how they interact with our kids and families,” stated Walsh. “This program has facilitated many connections that are lifelong for our kids. We desperately need to make sure that our kids have positive people in their lives and people they can go to for help as they get older.”

To be a positive role model in a child’s life through fostering or adoption, call 937-224-KIDS(5437) to ask to speak to an adoption recruiter about the process. You can also ask to speak to Kelly specifically.

MONARCH WAY STATION

The Carroll High School courtyard is undergoing a metamorphosis, just like many of its new inhabitants. A group of students spent a few afternoons in September clearing dead plants and replacing them with sunflowers, black-eyed susan, marigolds, and even milkweed to create a waystation for monarch butterflies.

The students are connecting ideas they've learned in the classroom about plant life, animal life, and conservation and putting them into practice to help mitigate damage to monarchs' natural habitats. AP Bio Anh Pham '20 and Kristin Hildebrant '20 are leading the way.

"It makes the environment better and provides more habitats for animals like butterflies," Pham says. "We're making the world a better place by having a waystation here."

"At Carroll, our mission is always to help other people and be good Christians," Hildebrant added. "This helps other people and the environment, and every living thing has its part in the food chain. If we're doing our part to conserve the butterflies and help them, we're helping other people."

"We're making the world a better place by having a waystation here."

The students designed the waystation to provide nourishment for the butterflies and a safe space from natural predators. Caterpillars, chrysalis, and butterflies have already started appearing in the waystation, and Carroll science teacher Dr. Christina O' Malley is considering keeping an official count of butterflies, collecting eggs, and growing caterpillars either in the waystation or one of the school's science labs to collect data about the area's impact.

O'Malley obtained all the plants from Monarch Watch, an outreach group focused on monarch conservation. Monarch Watch provided the students with a variety of plants like blazing star, bee balm, coneflower, and aster -- all native to Dayton region, another key factor in the conservation aspect of this project. Classrooms, St. John the Evangelist Chapel, and the faculty and student lunch rooms all have windows to view the waystation garden and its new residents so that other students and faculty members can enjoy a reinvigorated part of campus that is making a positive impact on our local and global communities.

MARIGOLD PROJECT

Since the day Carroll High School opened its doors, its faculty and staff have answered the vocation and calling to create a nurturing environment that helps young learners grow in their faith and knowledge. A trip to the birthplace of Catholic education and a common garden flower inspired Principal Matt Sableski '91 to help Carroll's educators provide that same environment for their colleagues.

During a visit to the National Shrine of St. Elizabeth Ann Seton, Sableski purchased a prayer votive for Carroll at the shrine just outside of Washington. As the founder of St. Joseph's Academy and Free School, Mother Seton planted the seeds of Catholic education in the United States. Her philosophy on education still resonates centuries later.

"Mother Seton believed that a school should be a model of Christ," Sableski says. "It should reflect his teachings, and those who work in a Catholic School should model Christ. We have to help our students grow in knowledge and faith, but [faculty and staff] have to help each other do this as well. It's easy to get caught up in the minutia, the logistics, and the details of every day, but they cannot become more important than being present to our students, their families, and each other."

The idea to "be a marigold" as a call for Carroll's faculty to support one another took root after a conversation between Sableski and a few teachers. Based on the concept of companion planting, placing certain plants near each other to improve growth for one or both plants, Sableski challenged the faculty at the first staff meeting of the year to serve as marigolds. Marigolds are known for encouraging growth for a wide variety of plants while protecting them from weeds and pests.

"Marigolds exist in our schools as well — encouraging, supporting, and nurturing growing fellow teachers," Sableski says. "You can identify them by the way their offers to help sound sincere, or even just by how you feel when you're with them."

At each faculty meeting, Sableski takes a few moments to recognize the Marigolds of the Month. Based on nominations from colleagues, the award honors faculty members who make the extra effort to provide support, speak words of encouragement, or do anything they can to help make someone's day a little easier. Each Marigold of the Month receives a marigold seed kit to grow in classrooms and offices.

One of the first Marigold of the Month honorees was Science Department Co-chair Mrs. Laura Wright. She started a monthly book club focused on the ever-changing nature of education for teachers looking to grow as marigolds for the fellow educators and their students. The group meets regularly to pick new books to read and share what they have learned from previous selections.

"We are trying to help each other do our best teaching and work with the students," Wright says. "It helps us support each other, and I think this helps us think about each other a little more."

FIELD DEDICATION

ON SEPTEMBER 6, 2019, 58 years to the day after Carroll High School opened its doors for the first time, the Patriot community gathered to start a new era of school history. The dedication ceremony for Spoerl-Bartlett Field and all-weather track was a moment that thousands of Patriots had dreamt of since their days as students. Fans, major donors, and representatives of the field's namesake families were on hand as Principal Matt Sableski '91 addressed the crowd and then witnessed Fr. Ethan Moore bless the new facility before the first football game of the inaugural season.

Brian Thomeczek '96 attended the event with many of his family members. The Thomeczek family's history as major donors to Carroll date back to the earliest days of the grass field. Brian's father, Jim '66, joined the "Carroll 100 Club" boosters in the 1980s, and his father made a major gift to the original stadium construction project. Continuing his grandfather's legacy of giving made the night even more memorable for Brian, James, and their family.

"Carroll and the field has a special place in our family. My grandfather started [Northwestern Tool], the company I run today. He and the company donated the prior scoreboard, so it always gave us a sense of pride for the field," Brian recalled. "That was the first Carroll game my family had ever attended and we were all excited to watch them play. It was even better to see them win the game. The field looked amazing, especially under the lights. It was a special day for everyone that attended."

"The dedication of anything is always exciting, seeing the results of hours and hours of discussions, planning, fundraising and construction," Jim said. "Students moving forward will know that those who came before them cared enough to make sacrifices for future generations and hope that they too will continue to pay it forward."

The Patriots played one of their best games of the season, a 23-13 win over Tecumseh. Wide receiver Steven Chapman '21 scored the first Patriot touchdown on the new field, a 26 yard pass from quarterback Trent Fox '20. Sam Severt '21 picked off a Tecumseh pass and returned it 27 yards, and Fox threw another big touchdown pass in the second half, finding eventual GCL Co-ed Offensive Player of the Year Donovan LaJuenesse '20 for a 68 yard touchdown. The boys' and girls' soccer teams combined for a 17-1-2 record on Spoerl-Bartlett Field and a GCL Co-ed Championship for the boys. Carroll student athletes cherish their memories of hard-fought victories for decades, but cheering from stands sticks with the spectators just as strongly.

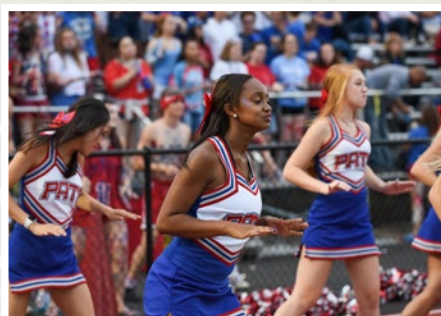

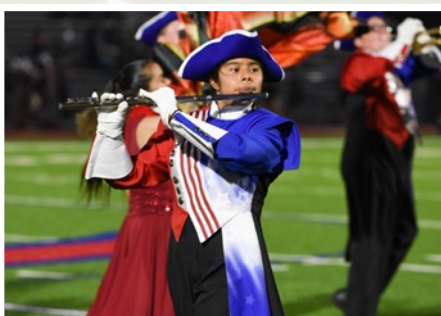

"I remember when I was a student going to the soccer and football games and watching our classmates and friends play," Brian said. "We had amazing times bonding with our classmates and making lifelong friends. My absolute favorite thing was going to a football game and having a sock hop after, especially if we had just won the game. It was a wonderful experience celebrating and having fun with our friends and fellow classmates."

The $2.3 million dollar field, track, and lighting project is just the first phase of renovations for Patriot Stadium. Upcoming renovations planned as part of Foundation for the Future: The Campaign for Carroll High School feature an overhaul of the rest of the outdoor facility including a new entry plaza, press box, bleachers, field house, and even an additional field.

"When [Principal Sableski] said 'It's a great day to be a Patriot,' it felt very surreal," Brian said. "Seeing the physical changes made to the school and seeing the excitement and applause from the faculty, alumni, parents, and students, it displayed very clearly why the future is bright for the school and its students. This campaign and the work being done will improve the Carroll experience."

Football, soccer, cross country, and the Marching Patriots all call Spoerl-Bartlett Field home. Enjoy some of the sights from the fall season, and join us in the spring for the first season of lacrosse and track on Spoerl-Bartlett Field.

These generous major donors have made The Foundation for the Future possible. Please follow their example and invest in this campaign!

WHAT ARE YOUR FAVORITE MEMORIES AS A STUDENT AT CARROLL?

My favorite memories of Carroll center around the daily activities of high school done with friends I'd had since grade school and am still in contact with today.

I chose to make a gift to the Capital Campaign because the goals of the campaign were transparent and achievable.

WHY DID YOU CHOOSE TO MAKE A GIFT TO THE CAMPAIGN?

WHAT PART OF THE CAMPAIGN EXCITES YOU THE MOST AND WHY?

The initial goals and funding are aimed at revamping and adding to the science labs, making them state of the art. This will benefit both current and future students for many years.

Now is the time to contribute because anyone that does so can be sure that their contribution is going toward definite goals that have already been organized and planned out. There is nothing nebulous about how your contribution is going to help Carroll HS and the students.

WHY IS NOW THE TIME TO MAKE A GIFT TO THE CAMPAIGN?

WHY IS FOUNDATION FOR THE FUTURE:

The Campaign for Carroll High School a worthy cause?

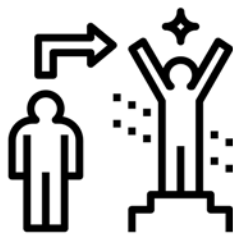

I believe that the values that I learned at Carroll have made it possible for me to pursue my goals. A contribution that in some small way adds to Carroll's ability to continue teaching these values makes the campaign a great cause.

Romances come and go for many students throughout their high school years, but for some couples, the flames grow and forge a bond that lasts through teenage years, college, and ultimately into marriage. Allison and Kelly Corrigan are one of those couples.

Twenty-four years after meeting at Carroll, Allison still remembers seeing Kelly for the first time in Ms. Laura Beery's anatomy class in the first semester of her junior year. Even though Allison had a crush on Kelly after a mutual friend introduced them, their relationship gradually grew from classmates to friends. They went on their first date around the time of Kelly's 18th birthday: a trip to the mall, an Italian dinner downtown at the Spaghetti Warehouse, and a stroll through the Beavercreek Wetlands.

Their foundation as friends helped keep them close after Kelly graduated in the spring of 1997 to attend Wright State University and began his path to a career in medicine. Allison finished high school a year later to pursue a nursing degree at Sinclair Community College. Kelly eventually moved to attend medical school at the University of Cincinnati while Allison was finishing her degree, a time that Allison recalls as one of the most difficult times of their relationship.

"It was tricky. He was definitely busy with school, wanting to do well to get into medical school, and I had to find my own identity. It was a struggle through medical school because he was in Cincinnati, and I was finishing my degree here. I would go down when I could, but I worked on the weekends."

With nursing school behind her, Allison moved to be with Kelly through his final part of medical school, internship at The Jewish Hospital in Cincinnati, residency at UC, and eventually to Columbus for a fellowship at The Ohio State University in 2010.

"I don't know that there was any trick," Kelly remembers. "She was a good friend and always supportive of me. She knew when I had to commit to school but still wanted my attention. She knew the repercussions."

Kelly's support to Allison during her time at nursing school was just as crucial.

"He was just always very supportive," Allison says. "He always helped me study and just understood what I was going through. Having his support through studying for licensure and final exams, he was always there. He would help me when I needed it or understood when I needed to study. Just having a friend to lean on when I was struggling with certain things, he was always there."

The distance and demands of attending college away from each other strengthened their relationship, but

Allison always knew that Kelly was the man she wanted to marry. "It was very early on, if not in high school, right after high school. We just always clicked and have been good friends. Kelly is definitely my best friend. We make each other laugh. We have a good time together. I always felt that connection with Kelly and thought this is the man I am going to spend the rest of my life with."

"I don't know that there was a specific moment that I could reference, but as we became closer and better friends, I realized that I couldn't imagine her not being in my life," Kelly says.

In 2001, Kelly built his plan to ask Allison to be his wife around one of their favorite Christmas traditions. One

December evening during a visit to the legendary lights at Clifton Mill, Kelly bought hot chocolate for Allison and walked her over to the centuries-old grist mill wheel, pulled out the ring, and proposed. On December 20, 2003, nearly two years to the day after their engagement, Kelly and Allison became the Corriganes at St. Cecelia Catholic Church in the Oakley neighborhood of Cincinnati. Leading up to the wedding, Kelly was balancing the start of his marriage with one of the most difficult stretches of medical school. Kelly took Step 2 of the United States Medical Licensing Exam the day before the wedding. Even through Kelly's exhaustion, their marriage ceremony and reception at Paul Brown Stadium stands out as one of the happiest days of their lives.

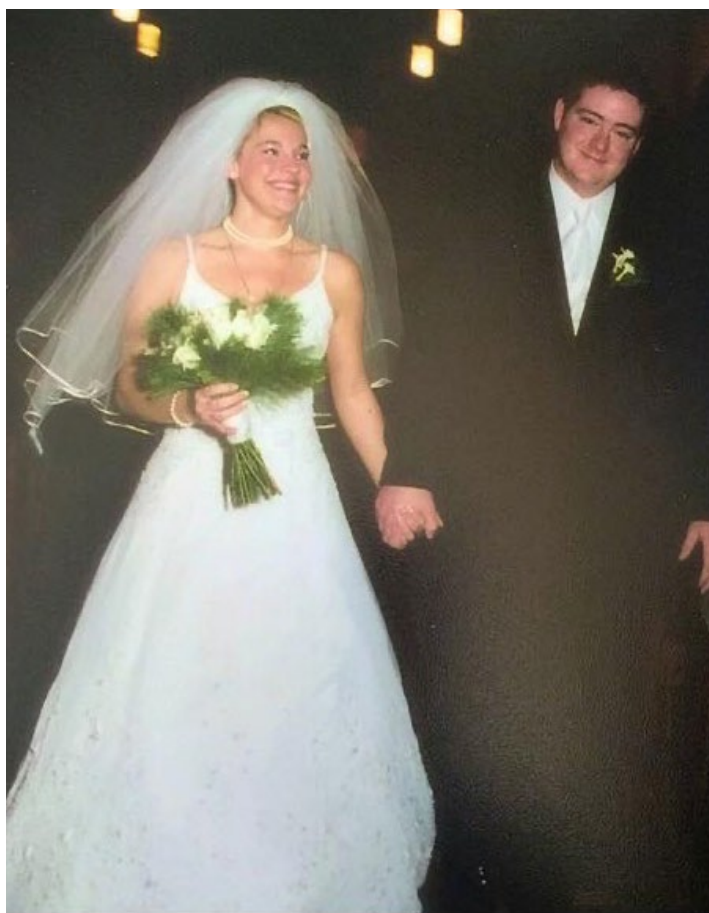

"I don't know that there was a specific moment that I could reference, but as we became closer and better friends, I realized that I couldn't imagine her not being in my life"

Now in their sixteenth year of marriage, Kelly and Allison always make time not only to maintain, but strengthen the foundation of their love. Kelly commutes to Columbus in the evenings for his job as a radiologist at the Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center, and Allison serves as a nurse at St. Brigid School in Xenia where their sons Liam and Wyatt are students. Making time for yearly adults-only vacations to the Virgin Islands, romantic dinners at Flemming's or Pasha, lunch dates for tex-mex or sushi, and occasional weekend getaways to Cincinnati are perfect balances to the demands of their professional and family lives.

"Taking time for our marriage and just the two of us is really important," Allison says. "We can get caught up in his job or the kids. It's nice when we go on day dates or we make a point to go out to dinner."

Looking back on their decades-long relationship, Kelly and Allison agree that the secret to a marriage filled with love and dedication is not much of a secret at all.

"In today's society, there's a tendency for people to give up easily and perceive that something else is better or easier without valuing what you have," Kelly says. "If people think what they have is valuable, it is worth working for. There are no relationships without peaks and valleys. There will be times when you're ready to quit and throw in the towel, and there will be times when it's the best time of your life. My advice would be to look at what you have and figure out if it's valuable to your life. If it is, it's worth working for."

"Take it one day at a time," Allison says. "Like Kelly said, relationships are not always easy. Sometimes you have to work and sacrifice to be successful. It takes a lot of dedication, and we've been dedicated to each other."

The 42nd Annual Cross Country Alumni Run was held on Saturday, August 10, 2019. It was the first official event held on the new track. A large crowd of alumni, parents, and friends participated in the event and enjoyed a delicious cookout afterward.
